

You know that saying, “When in Rome, do as the Romans do”?

Well, you ain't heard nothing yet. For the Italians, everything begins and ends with a proverb. And not just any proverb. Most of their proverbs begin and end with food. That's the way it is when your life is filled with olive oil stains, the smell of balsamic vinegar, mozzarella cheese which has been torn between your fingers, something which just came out of the oven fresh and warm, a little coarse salt, a bit of freshly ground black pepper, and a glass of wine of course.

Want an example? Here you go:

“Tutto finisce a tarallucci e vino.”

What does it mean in English?

“It all ends well with biscuits and wine.”

What does it mean for the Italians that it all ends with biscuits and wine, you ask? It means that everything will turn out fine in the end. And how will everything turn out fine if we don't eat something sweet and drink something and forget all our troubles?

They roll their entire world in a bit of flour. And so do we. We do as the Romans do in Tel Aviv. We have been putting proper food on your table for more than 10 years now. Fresh, without cheating, with a big smile. Just like that, the way you like it. Take our word for it. “Conosco i miei polli,” we know our chicken. In other words, we know what we're talking about.

“Dire pane al pane e vino al vino,” which literally means “calling bread bread and wine wine.” In other words, calling a spade a spade – calling something as it is. The pizza is pizza, the pasta is pasta.

Buon appetito – enjoy your meal.

la pizza

This is what we do:

We mix flour and water, roll out dough, place on it tomatoes, mozzarella cheese, basil, roasted peppers, salami, mushrooms, onion, zucchini, olives, whatever you say, put it in the oven, take it out of the oven – and serve it to your table.

It's called pizza. Anything we say beyond that would simply be idle chatter. And we are here to do what we know, without any unnecessary babble.
